BASED ON THE NOVEL BY DOMINIQUE MORISSEAU

Dominique Morisseau is an American Playwright and actress. She has authored over 9 plays, 3 of which are part of a cycle titled "The Detroit Project". She was the recipient of the MacArthur Fellowship –Known as the "Genius Grant."

MUD ROW:

Regine must decide the fate of a house she never wanted, the same house where Toshi's been squatting for three months. Elsie is willing to do anything to move up in the world, while her sister Frances is willing to risk her life to change it. Beneath the roof of one house, generations apart, these women must confront their shared legacies, and each other, in this riveting, humorous, and hopeful story about the love between sisters from one of America's most vital voices. Two generations of sisters navigate class, race, love and family on "Mud Row," an area in the East End of West Chester, Pennsylvania. Elsie hopes to move up in the world by marrying into "the talented tenth," while her sister Frances joins the fight for Civil Rights. Decades later, estranged sisters Regine and Toshi are forced to reckon with their shared heritage and each other, when Regine inherits granny Elsie's house.
